NEW STORE on Sansome street. The subscribers having purchased and made alterations in the building formerly occupied by Mr. Missell as a hotel, are now prepared to supply the wants of their customers more fully than can be done at any other store in this city. We are constant-keep at all times on hand, a full assortment of clothing, furnishing goods, boots and shoes, hats and caps, fancy goods, guns and pistols, powder, shot and caps, blankets, mining tools, trunks, carpet bags, &c. &c.,

and shall endeavor to live up to our old motto of "large sales and small profits."
Persons going to the mines will find this the most convenient place to get their supplies, as it is near the landing, and every thing they require can be bought here at the lowest prices.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Tuesday, October 30, 1849.

Party Organization.

We give place to the following letter upon this subject very willingly, because it raises a question, in very clear terms, which has doubtless already suggested itself, more or less distinctly, to many minds in our community:

Mr. Editor.—I am a Democrat and I always vote the regular Democratic Ticket, without thought of bolting from my party. But what am I to do now? The Democratic meeting in the square, on Thursday, appointed, as I thought, very fairly, a Nominating Committee of eleven, to nominate a Ticket and report the names to the meeting for ratification when it should meet again on Saturday evening. But the meeting on Saturday did not ratify the nominations of its Committee. On the contrary, it adopted a Resolution to appoint and elect a Judge and Inspectors of an Election, to be held on the following Monday, to choose another Committee to nominate a whole Ticket without submitting it to any one for ratification. Now I want to vote the regular Ticket and no other, and I wish you would tell me where, in your opinion, I am to find the genuine article.

Yours:

A DEMOCRAT.

We will answer our perplexed friend, in a few words. Vote the ticket which, upon due examination, you most approve. If you wholly approve no ticket offered, scratch it, and put on other names which you like better. The various tickets before you, however honestly made up, are merely recommendations; they have no party regularity or party authority about them. They have in their favor: neither the forms nor the substance of Democratic Party organization. The forms manifestly have not been complied with, and from the nature of our situation in this country, they cannot be complied with.

before the coming election. The substance of Democratic Party organization, upon which the whole principle of its authority rests, is found, we conceive, in the knowledge which the Democrats, in each section of any state, are supposed to have of their eminent Democratic fellow citizens in other sections. This knowledge, or acquaintance, is supposed to be embodied or represented in the nominations of the various local or general committees, or conventions; and such nominations when confirmed in public Democratic meetings, are regarded as authentic expressions of the popular will. Now here we have nothing of all this. Our enquiring friend, therefore, must, as we conceive, make up his mind for himself when all the tickets are before him. We do not see how one more than the other can claim to be the regular party ticket.

Arrival of the Steamship Senator.

This fine boat arrived in our Port on Saturday last, having left Panama on the 6th inst. She brings, we learn, about two hundred passengers, but no mails nor regular files of papers. We have however been favored with a sight of the New York Tribune of Sept. 15th, and the New Orleans Picayune and Delta of the same day; being, we believe, the latest dates brought from those cities. These papers give no news of importance. The cholera is hardly spoken of and appears to have entirely subsided.

The most important intelligence to our community which the Senator brings relates to the mails. We learn by her that the "Unicorn" which left Panama three days before her has no mail on board. We learn also by the Panama Star of the 6th October that the Falcon had arrived at Chagres with the mail on the 24th of September but that up to the 6th of October, twelve days (!) thereafter the mail had not reached Panama. The steamer Panama was waiting for it and was to leave on the 8th or 10th. There is a chance therefore, that we may get a mail at last, just before the steamer of 1st proximo sails from here.

We learn that the iron steamer Santa Cruz, which left Rio Janeiro on or about the 25th of May, sprung a leak when two days out, and in spite of the exertions of the crew and passengers went down before reaching land. The passengers and crew saved themselves by resorting to the boats, but lost every thing. The Santa Cruz had been lying in the port of Rio during more than two years past.

Our acknowledgements are due Mr. H. T. Green, through whose kind consideration we have received a splendid loaf of fruit cake, in size about as large as a peck measure, accompanied by the compliments of the presenter. We know not for what reason we are thus made the recipients of so generous an instance of courtesy; but whatever may have induced the act, we acknowledge the cake, and assure our friend that he has our best wishes for his welfare.

We call the attention of our readers to an advertisement in our columns—"For N. York, per Empire City," reminding them that it is to the enterprise of Messrs. Howard & Son, that they are indebted for the letters and papers up to September 3d, which were received here October 10th—now 38 days in advance of the regular (!) mail—not yet arrived. The few N. Y. papers, as late as September 15, by steamer Senator, from Panama, were brought by the steamer Empire City, which left New York on the 15th of September.

First Trip of the Steamer M'Kim.

The steamer M'Kim, made her first trip to Sacramento City, leaving San Francisco on Friday last, at half past 12 M. Through the politeness of Messrs. Simmons, Hutchinson & Co., we were included among the invited guests who went up on the M'Kim, on this occasion. The boat is a large, commodious craft, being arranged for the convenience of passengers, with a cabin and state rooms extending the whole length of the boat. The M'Kim had on board, on her upward passage, about 150 passengers, and, we should judge, about the same number on her return. She had a large quantity of freight in her hold, and drew about eight feet of water—but performed the passage without difficulty, touching bottom only once, and then in consequence of being forced out of the channel by a large vessel, which filled the passage way. The detention, however, was of short duration, and she arrived at Sacramento City in 17 hours from San Francisco, running time.

The arrival of the M'Kim was greeted, at Sutter's landing and at Sacramento City, with the most enthusiastic evidences of gratification at the occurrence of so interesting an incident in the history of California, by which the waters of the Sacramento presented, at one bound, a degree of advancement in civilization and enterprise, by the introduction of steam navigation, equal to the oldest State in the Union. The discharge of cannon, and the loud plaudits of the assembled multitude, on the banks of the river, made the welkin ring. The Indians, encamped a few miles below Sutter's mills, as the steamer passed, exhibited a degree of amazement quite amusing to those on board, and we venture to say if their thoughts could be known, they would pronounce the white men the most incomprehensible beings they ever dreamed of.

We wish we had time to express fully our admiration of the beautiful river and the country adjacent—a view of which is only necessary to convince the most prejudiced of the falsity of such representations as have been so freely made by those who, from various causes, have been unsuccessful in California. At a future time we shall have more to say upon this subject, by way of doing justice to a country which presents the most unbounded resources in agricultural pursuits, and which invites, by the salubrity of her climate, except in isolated cases, the emigration of the sober and the industrious. In the mean time we have only to advise those who have doubts about California being a beautiful country, to take a trip in the M'Kim, and they will, we think, agree with us in the remarks above.

Execution of the Sentence of the Court Martial.

The awful extreme penalty of the law was carried into execution on the 23d inst., about 11 a. m., by hanging Peter Black at the fore yard arm of the U. S. Frigate Savannah, and John Black, alias —, at the fore yard arm of the U. S. Schooner Ewing, in presence of all the ships and vessels of the United States on this station. All necessary preparations being previously made, at the appointed time, the hands, by signal from the flag ship, were called to witness punishment, when several orders and short addresses were made to all the crews and officers assembled in uniform. The condemned were attended to the deck, as they had been for several days, by the Chaplain of the Frigate, assisted by most of the clergymen from shore, who, without distinction of denomination, promptly rendered their services. When the last moment arrived, by an ingenious contrivance, the fatal gun was discharged, when a weight attached to one end of the cord (the other being adjusted around the neck of the criminal) was set free, and, by its preponderance, the victims were rapidly run up to the yard arms, without a struggle, or the slightest muscular action, discernable by any on deck. We understand that everything throughout this tragic scene in our navy was conducted with much decorum and becoming gravity.

The following are the warrants of the latter:

The Naval General Court Martial, by which John Black, Jonathan Biddy, William Hall, Peter Black and Henry Comerford, all seamen belonging to the Navy of the United States, have been recently tried for the high crimes of mutiny and desertion, under the most aggravating circumstances, have, after a patient and full hearing of all the evidence, found them guilty of mutiny, desertion, and running away with a boat, the property of the U. States; and John Black, further guilty of desertion, with attempt to kill, and running away with a boat, the property of the United States; and the Court hath adjudged and sentenced them, and each of them, to suffer death, by hanging, until they are dead, at the yard arm of such vessels in the service of the U. States, and at such time, and in such waters, as the Commander of the U. States Squadron in the Pacific Ocean may think proper to direct.

This awful, but just sentence is approved, and will be carried into execution between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 o'clock, p. m., on Tuesday, the 23d day of the present month.

Although every possible opportunity, and every latitude, with the aid of able counsel to assist in their defence, has been allowed, no haste in bringing them to trial, no hurry nor restriction in examining the witnesses before an honorable and intelligent Court, composed of the highest number (thirteen members) allowed by law, and three officers of the highest rank, and most experience in the squadron, taken from other than their own vessel—so that, in whatever light their trial and conviction may be viewed, it can never be said that it was unfair, or that the amplest means of defence were not afforded. It is for the purpose of carrying into effect the foregoing extreme punishment that we are now assembled.

My Special Order, bearing date Flag Ship Savannah, October 19th, 1849, directing the execution, at 11 o'clock this day, of John Black and four other seamen, of the U. S. Schooner Ewing, condemned by sentence of a Naval General Court Martial, to suffer death, is hereby modified and annulled, so far as to commute the sentence of death in the case of Jonathan Biddy, William Hall and Henry Comerford to that of corporal punishment by ships, and imprisonment, as will be hereafter made known.

The sentence of death will be carried out at the appointed hour, 11 o'clock today, on John Black, on board the Ewing, and on Peter Black, on board the Savannah, instead of on board the Warren, as directed by special order above cited.

And for so doing, this shall be unto you, and unto all concerned therein, a good and sufficient warrant.

Given under my hand, on board the United States Frigate Savannah, at anchor off the town of San Francisco, this 23d day of October, 1849. (Signed)

THOS. AP. C. JONES, Commander in Chief, Pacific Squadron.

The determination of the Commander in Chief to commute the sentence of death against Jonathan Biddy, William Hall and Henry Comerford, is not the result of any diminution of his abhorrence of the offence of which they were convicted by the Naval General Court Martial, nor from the slightest doubt of the justice of the sentence of the court. It was the province and duty of the court sitting in judgment on the accused, to pronounce them guilty or not guilty, and the law fixes the penalty of the offences perpetrated; but to the reviewing power is left the exercise of clemency, when mercy can be shown without defeating the positive ends of justice. It is a humane and merciful maxim, as just as it is charitable, that the life of man should never be taken when anything short of the taking of life would fully meet the ends of justice, and be sufficient punishment for the crimes committed.

Regarding these maxims as principles never to be lost sight of by the reviewing power, when finally deciding the question of life or death of a fellow being, the great question arises, whether the discipline of the Navy is so low, or the fidelity of its seamen so little to be relied on, as to forbid the exercise of mercy in the present instance. I cannot, will not believe it. What better proof need we than the fact that since the law of April 23d, 1800, was enacted for the government of the Navy, now near half a century, this is the first instance, with one exception, where the sentence of death has been passed by a Court Martial for any other crime than murder; nor, so far as my information goes, has there ever been more than one person condemned by the same court, or even in the same squadron. With this bright and honorable retrospect, may we not now, can we not now, exercise mercy, and by that mercy disarm the wicked? I believe we may, and therefore try the experiment, but let it be remembered that the clemency now shown is not based upon any claim or pretence to it, on the ground that the offences upon which the accused were condemned to die, are not worthy of death. No—no such plea can be entered—no such claim can be admitted—the sentence of the Court was just, and in strict conformity to the law; and in exercising the high prerogative of mercy, it is only with the sincere hope and confident expectation that the clemency shown will have a salutary effect in reclaiming the wicked, and in confirming the penitent. (Signed)

THOS. AP. C. JONES, Commander in Chief, Pacific Squadron.

FLAG SHIP SAVANNAH, Off San Francisco, 23d October, 1849.

VIEW OF THE CITY AND HARBOR OF SAN FRANCISCO.—We have seen a view of our city, engraved on copper, by Mr. Thos. Armstrong, and published by W. A. Woodruff, Esq.—a light and elegant production. The view extends from point to point—the magnificent harbor, with its hundreds of vessels, the island, and the distant hills stretching away in the distance. But that which charms us most is the city, embracing every street and public building, with a dense population, all, to our mind's eye, engaged in some business transaction.

The undulation of hill and dale, the artist has managed with consummate skill.—We wish the spirited publisher success in his undertaking, and we trust he will indulge us with a series periodically. We believe the majority of our citizens will have one copy to send to their friends and another to hang in their rooms, as no one will be without, who has ten dollars to spare. The engraving will be ready for delivery on Wednesday morning, at the store of W. A. Woodruff, on Clay street.—(Communicated.)

FOR CALIFORNIA.—The Buffalo Express says: "We understand that the owners of the brig Eureka, one of the largest vessels on the lake, have obtained permission from the British Government to let that vessel pass through the river St. Lawrence, and that she will leave in the fall, with a cargo of lumber, direct for California."

Our State Constitution.

We intended to commence to-day, and complete as soon as possible, the publication of the Constitution recently adopted by the convention assembled at Monterey. We deem it proper, however, first to publish the following Introductory Address, explaining its character and objects, which we find given at length in the Report of the proceedings of the Convention. As to the merits of the Constitution itself and its adaptation to the present political wants of California, we hear of no difference of opinion either in our city or any where in the State. We can entertain no doubt of its immediate ratification by the People on the 13th of next month.

Mr. Steuart, from the committee, appointed to prepare an address to the people of California, presented the following, which was unanimously adopted, viz:

TO THE PEOPLE OF CALIFORNIA.

The undersigned, Delegates to a Convention authorized to form a Constitution for the State of California, having to the best of their ability, discharged the high trust committed to them, respectfully submit the accompanying plan of government for your approval. Acknowledging the great fundamental principles, that all political power is inherent in the people, and that government is instituted for the protection, security and benefit of the people, the Constitution presented for your consideration is intended only to give such organic powers to the several departments of the proposed government as shall be necessary for its efficient administration; and while it is believed no power has been given, which is not thus essentially necessary, the convention deem individual rights as well as public liberty are amply secured by the people still retaining not only the great conservative power of free choice and election of all officers, agents and representatives, but the inalienable right to alter or reform their government, whenever the public good may require.

Although born in different climes, coming from different states, imbued with local feelings and educated perhaps with predilections for peculiar institutions, laws and customs, the delegates assembled in Convention, as Californians, and carried on their deliberations in a spirit of amity, compromise and mutual concession for the public weal.

It cannot be denied, that a difference of opinion was entertained in the Convention, as to the policy and expediency of several measures embodied in the Constitution; but looking to the great interests of the State of California, the peace, happiness and prosperity of the whole people,—individual opinions were freely surrendered to the will of the majority, and with one voice we respectfully but earnestly recommend to our Fellow Citizens, the adoption of the Constitution which we have the honor to submit.

In establishing a boundary for the State, the convention conformed as near as was deemed practicable and expedient to great natural landmarks, so as to bring into a union, all those who should be included by mutual interest, mutual wants and mutual dependence. No portion of territory included the inhabitants of which, were not or might not have been legitimately represented in the convention, under the authority by which it was convened; and in unanimously resolving to exclude slavery from the State of California, the great principle has been maintained, that to the people of each State and Territory, alone, belongs the right to establish each municipal regulation, and to decide such questions, as affect their own peace, prosperity and happiness.

A free people, in the enjoyment of an elective government, capable of securing their civil, religious and political rights, may rest assured these inestimable privileges can never be wrested from them, so long as they keep a watchful eye on the operations of their government, and hold to strict accountability, those to whom power is delegated. No people were ever yet enslaved, who knew and dared maintain the co-relative rights and obligations of free and independent citizens. A knowledge of the laws—their moral force and efficacy, thus becomes an essential element of freedom, and makes public education of primary importance. In this view, the Constitution of California provides for, and guarantees in the most ample manner, the establishment of common schools, seminaries and colleges, so as to extend the blessings of education throughout the land, and secure its advantages to the present and future generations. Under the peculiar circumstances in which California becomes a State—with an unexampled increase of a population coming from every part of the world, speaking various languages, and imbued with different feelings and prejudices, no form of government, no system of laws, can be expected to meet with immediate and unanimous assent. It is to be remembered, moreover, that a considerable portion of our fellow citizens are natives of Old Spain, Californians, and those who have voluntarily relinquished the rights of Mexicans, to enjoy those of American citizens. Long accustomed to a different form of government, regarding the rights of person and of property as interwoven with ancient usages and time honored customs, they may not at once see the advantage of the proposed new government, or yield immediate approval of new laws, however salutary their provisions or conducive to the general welfare. But it is confidently believed when the government as now proposed shall have gone into successful operation, when each department thereof shall move on in its appropriate and respective sphere; when laws based on the eternal principles of equity and justice, shall be established; when every citizen of California shall find himself secure in life, liberty and property—all will unite in the cordial support of institutions which are not only the pride and boast of every true hearted citizen of the Union, but have gone forth, a guiding light to every people groping through the gloom of religious superstition or political fanaticism. Institutions, which even now, while all Europe is agitated with the convulsive efforts of nations battling for liberty, have become the mark and model of government, for every people who would hold themselves free, sovereign and independent.

With this brief exposition of the views and opinions of the Convention, the undersigned submit the Constitution and plan of government for your approval. They earnestly recommend it to your calm and deliberate consideration, and especially do they most respectfully urge on every voter to attend the Polls.

The putting into operation of a government, which shall establish justice, ensure domestic tranquility, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of civil, religious and political liberty, should be an object of the deepest solicitude to every true hearted citizen, and the consummation of his dearest wishes. The price of liberty is eternal vigilance, and thus it is not only the privilege but the duty of every voter to vote his sentiments. No freeman of this land, who values his birth right, and would transmit unimpaired to his children an inheritance so rich in glory and in honor, will refuse to give one day to the service of his country. Let every qualified voter go early to the polls, and give his FREE vote at the election appointed to be held on Tuesday, the 13th day of November next, not only that a full and fair expression of the public voice may be had, for or against a Constitution intended to secure the peace, happiness and prosperity of the whole people, but that their numerical and political strength may be made manifest, and the world see by what majority of freemen California, the bright star of the west, claims a place in the diadem of that glorious Republic, formed by the union of thirty-one sovereign states.

WALKING.—Of all kinds of exercise, walking is that which is the most universally attainable, and at the same time the best. Calling so many muscles into action, and especially those of the lower extremities, of which the circulation is apt to be more languidly and imperfectly performed, from the decree of resistance presented by the force of gravity to the return of the blood to the heart, calling, moreover, so much of the moving apparatus of the body into a reciprocal and balanced action, flexor and extensor muscles being correspondingly exercised—walking is undoubtedly the best of all exercises for the purposes of health independently of its secondary, and by no means little useful effect, of carrying the respiratory organs into the freer and purer air, and exposing the system to the extraordinary and (at least in the colder and temperate countries of the earth) the healthful influence of the direct rays of the sun. The degree of the exercise, must of course vary with the age, condition, and habits of the individual; but the degree of the exercise that in most cases is serviceable is generally much underrated. Three miles a day is the minimum distance which a person of moderate health and strength ought to walk. If the powers of the system increase, or are stronger to begin with, the minimum up to be four miles. The subject should be able, in most cases, to walk four miles an hour; and the invalid, beginning, perhaps by walking a mile, or a mile and a half, in an hour, might gradually increase his rate of walking until he had accomplished this end. Quick walking calls more muscles into action than slow walking does, and is therefore better. The muscles of the back and trunk, neck and arms are comparatively very little used in slow walking. A person can hardly walk quickly without using them to a very considerable degree. It is a maxim so sound and important, as to deserve frequent repetition, that the greater the number of the muscles used, the more advantageous will be the exercise.

HEALTH OF PANAMA.—Our friends at home will be much pleased to learn that this city is entirely free from sickness of any consequence. The cholera has been here and is gone, leaving behind, as its only trace, the saddened hearts of relatives and friends, who mourn over its victims. We have occasionally a fine refreshing shower, which adds much to one's comforts.—Panama Star, Oct. 6.

By Proclamation, in conformity with treaty bearing date May 19th, at Bogota, the isthmus will be a free trade country from January next. No duties, no monopolies. The other provinces of New Grenada are not included in this Proclamation.—Id.

There are now five hundred emigrants on the Isthmus, nearly all of whom will be taken off by the Senator and Panama steamers, which vessels are still here.—Id.

Late accounts from Texas confirm the painful rumor of the destruction of Capt. Veach's company of California emigrants by the Indians. Out of thirty persons composing the company, only four were left to tell the sad tale of misfortunes which befel their companions.

All insolvents in the English P. O. Departments are to be forthwith dismissed.

OBITUARY.

Died, on board the Steamer McKim, on her passage from N. Orleans to San Francisco, in lat. 10 deg. North, lon. 110 deg. West, Mr. Wm. L. Houmellien, of Mobile, Ala. The subject of this notice, a native of Saybrook, Conn., was laboring under a pulmonary disease at the time of sailing, and was induced to embark on a sea voyage under the impression that it might prove beneficial to his health, and for the first part of the voyage he seemed to improve, and on his arrival at Rio Janeiro, he addressed letters to his friends announcing to them this cheering intelligence. After leaving this port he gradually declined and before the vessel had completed the long and tedious passage, he paid the debt of nature and was consigned to the bosom of the deep blue ocean, there to remain until the earth and the sea shall "give up their dead." He leaves a wife and child at Norwalk, Conn., as well as a large circle of friends and acquaintances to mourn his loss.

DIED.

In Stockton, (at the Hospital of Dr. Comstock,) on the 15th instant, Mr. Samuel O. Barker, of Rhode Island. Mr. B. was 8d mate of the whaler Tyber, of Stonington, Conn., which ship he got his discharge from at the Sandwich Islands, (after having cruised with and filled her,) and came to this country.

In Stockton, (at the Hospital of Dr. Comstock,) on the 10th instant, Mr. Samuel S. Park, aged 28 years. Mr. P. was from Romney, Indiana, where he has a father, mother, brothers and sisters living.

In this city, the 16th instant, Michael Sullivan, from New Orleans.
